PGCPS Students' Declines In Math Called "Concerning"

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On January 24, Maryland's Comprehensive Assessment Program (MCAP) results for Spring 2022 were released by the Maryland State Department of Education. For Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS), they showed some gains in English Language Arts (ELA) but declines in math competency that CEO Dr. Monica Goldson called "concerning."

Math Proficiency

The county's public schools saw a decline in math proficiency scores across every grade level, with the largest declines being among elementary school students, in the 5- to 11-year-old group. In a comparative look at the math proficiency levels, according to MCAP results, for grades three to eight PGCPS ranks second from the bottom with only 10 percent proficiency, ahead of only Baltimore City, which showed 7 percent. The state average was 22 percent

Legislative Priorities

Council Discusses Legislation, City Employee Compensation

by Deb Daniel

On January 23, Greenbelt City Council discussed various state and county legislation initiatives that may impact Greenbelt. Mayor Emmett Jordan stated that council may choose to support, oppose or take no action on the legislation. Council also discussed the recent compensation study on employees' salaries and will seek to bring Greenbelt's city employees' salaries more in line with other municipalities.

Maglev

Senate Bill 50/House Bill 106 prohibit Maryland (or any unit or instrumentality of Maryland) from using any appropriation for a magnetic levitation (maglev) transportation system located or to be located in Maryland.

Council supported this legislation unanimously.

Constant Yield

Senate Bill 114 modifies advertising requirements that local jurisdictions must follow regarding the constant yield tax rate by establishing a separate notification requirement for jurisdictions that maintain their real property tax rate from the prior year.

Councilmember Judith Davis pointed out that some language of the notice to taxpayers has already been made clearer. As one of its five legislative priorities outlined in the City of Greenbelt's 2023 Legislative Program Summary, the city has requested the state legislature create an explanation of the constant yield tax rate that residents can understand. For an in-depth explanation of Constant Yield Tax Credit and the confusion around its language see the January 5 issue of the News Review.

Council supported this legislation unanimously.

Rental Licensure

Senate Bill 100/House Bill 36 add requirements in order to repossess residential rental property. A key one is that a landlord must submit evidence that they comply with local rental property licensure requirements to the clerk of the court and demonstrate that they are compliant with licensing before they can repossess their property or evict tenants.

Trial Juror: Just One Day, One Trial (One Long Day)

by Pat Scully (Juror 16)

Unlike members of a grand jury, people who are called for trial (or petit) jury duty serve for one day or one trial. All registered voters and people who have a driver's license or an identification card through the Department of Motor Vehicles are in the pool and may receive a summons every year. However, jurors only have to serve once every three years, if called.

The summons lists a group number and a phone number to call after 6 p.m. on the day before the date of potential service. That phone call tells whether the group must report or is excused.

The following is an account of one individual on jury duty at the courthouse in Upper Marlboro in early December.

On Screen at Old Greenbelt Theatre

A Man Called Otto

Otto Anderson (Tom Hanks) is a grumpy widower whose only joy comes from criticizing and judging his exasperated neighbors. When a lively young family moves in next door, he meets his match in quick-witted and very pregnant Marisol, leading to an unexpected friendship that will turn his world upside down. The film is a remake of the Swedish film A Man Called Ove, which was based on a novel by Fredrik Backman. The English translation of the book became a New York Times bestseller.

Women Talking

Do nothing. Stay and fight. Or leave. In 2010, the women of an isolated religious community grapple with reconciling a brutal reality with their faith. From Director Sarah Polley, the film stars Jessie Buckley, Rooney Mara, Claire Foy, Judith Ivey, Ben Whishaw and Frances McDormand. “It’s a film with so much depth and, of course, one of the greater casts you’ll see this year,” says critic Amy Nicholson, of KPCC-NPR Los Angeles.

Living

Set in 1953, the film is the story of an ordinary man (Bill Nighy), reduced by years of oppressive office routine to a shadow existence, who at the 11th hour makes a supreme effort to turn his dull life into something wonderful. Directed by Oliver Hermanus from a screenplay by Kazuo Ishiguro, the story is adapted from the 1952 Japanese film Ikiru directed by Akira Kurosawa, which in turn was inspired by the 1886 Russian novella The Death of Ivan Ilyich by Leo Tolstoy. Says critic Candice McMillan of Seattle Refined, “Living breathes life into an otherwise quiet story of one man’s wrestle to accept his mortality ... portrayed with sweet, unassuming simplicity by Bill Nighy, the one part of the equation essential to the film’s sum believability and winsome charm.”

The Red Shoes

In this classic 1948 drama, Vicky Page (Moira Shearer) is an aspiring ballerina torn between her dedication to dance and her desire to love. While her imperious instructor, Boris Lermontov (Anton Walbrook), urges to her to forget anything but ballet, Vicky begins to fall for the charming young composer Julian Craster (Marius Goring). Eventually Vicky, under great emotional stress, must choose to pursue either her art or her romance, a decision that carries serious consequences.

The Bell Affair

From director Kwakiutl Dreher, this live-animated documentary tells the story of a family enslaved in Prince George’s County and Washington, D.C., in the 19th century. Daniel and Mary Bell sued for their freedom from slavery and won. After slaveholders threatened to re-enslave them and their children, the Bells led one of the largest escape attempts in American history. Their inspiring story is brought to cinema for the first time. Filmed and directed remotely during the Covid-19 pandemic, the cast was never in the same room with each other or with the director at the same time.

City Social Services Provide Variety Of Helpful Programs for Residents

by Gloria Walters-Flowers

The pandemic brought Greenbelt residents various challenges, increased hospitalizations and even loss of life. It also brought job loss, prolonged financial difficulties, food insecurity, anxiety and depression. Greenbelt CARES stepped in to extend a helping hand to the residents who needed help. And for those who needed wrap-around care, the program stood out, offering assistance and hope.

Greenbelt CARES, around since the 1970s, strives to address how Greenbelt, as a community, helps residents stay healthy. The staff of 17 provide free direct services for mental health and crisis counseling, educational services like GED preparation, community in-home nursing visits for seniors and pediatric residents as well as free produce distribution.

Mental Health Services

CARES offers family, group and individual counseling services that are in great demand and well respected. Even before the pandemic, there was a waiting list. Post-pandemic, CARES has seen an uptick in mental health care requests as Greenbelters continue navigating Covid-related financial impacts to their already stretched budgets, anxiety and depression. The clinicians and counselors are also busy with crisis counseling services, supporting victims of domestic violence and facilitating group sessions in local schools. Evening appointments are most popular; therefore, residents seeking services are likely to be seen more quickly during daytime hours. Because of county funding, CARES is able to provide counseling services to residents in areas surrounding Greenbelt.

Educational Services

cational services offered at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center Clubhouse are another important service. GED preparation, tutoring, ESOL and life skills, such as financial literacy and resumé preparation, are provided. The ESOL program is offered three times a week. Anger management classes are offered twice a year by court referral and by self-referral. According to CARES Director Liz Park, “The program remained steady throughout the pandemic.” Because of its success, the demand for anger management classes has prompted the organizers to consider offering the course more times throughout the year. Once participants have finished the nine-session course, they receive a certificate of completion. More importantly, they gain practical tools to help manage their anger. Another offering is parenting classes – to help empower and prepare young families as they attempt to raise the next generation.

Community Health

The Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) program focuses on the needs of Greenbelt seniors as they age in place. The program is open to adults 60+ and adults 50+ with disabilities residing within the Greenbelt city limits. Senior residents can access counseling and caregiver support services. GAIL established partnerships with Washington Adventist and Bowie State Universities’ nursing programs and the University of Maryland School of Health and Life Science Program. Nursing students gain experience in community nursing and the in-home nursing program helps seniors manage chronic illnesses like diabetes. The community nursing program extends its services to another vulnerable sector of the community: families with infants and toddlers. The visiting nurses check on the little ones to ensure that they are growing and developing and to verify they are up to date on immunizations. They offer parenting guidance to new parents and referrals to the

Thresholds and the Church Incarnate

Rev. Ann Kadlecek with Worship Associate Jacqui Walpole

In any life, there are thresholds – moments when we choose whether to let go of key aspects of the past and enter into something new and different. Each threshold is an uncertain and challenging place, where it can be helpful to pause, look around, remember and imagine. At this threshold in the life of this church and its people, we pause today to consider where we’ve been, and how the past might inform what comes next.

for the 2021-22 school year, with Carroll, Worcester, Howard, Queen Anne’s, Calvert, Montgomery, Frederick and St. Mary’s counties reporting proficiencies in the 30s. In the Algebra 1 Test only 6 percent of PGCPs students showed proficiency. For the sake of state comparison, four districts had 5 percent proficiency or less and, near the other end, Howard County had 32 percent.

Trends in Math

Falling proficiency in math is a trend not only in PGCPs, stressed Goldson in a press release, but one “mirrored across Maryland.” In fact, she stated, “The overall PGCPs mathematics declines were less substantial in most instances than the declines experienced by the state in each grade level.” Overall, tests indicate that less than a quarter of fifth-grade students are proficient in math statewide, though almost half are classified as developing learners, the level just below, according to the Maryland Department of Education. In Maryland, most grades improved their math scores compared to Fall 2021 assessments, though they haven’t returned to the pre-pandemic levels of the MCAP results in 2018-2019.

Achievement Gaps

The Maryland data from the MCAP point to widening achievement gaps for students based on race, class and disabilities. Though 36 percent of white students were proficient in math (a decrease from 50 percent in 2018-19), only 10 percent of Black students and 11 percent of Hispanic/Latino students were proficient (declines from 17 percent and 20 percent, respectively, in 2019). Fifty-three percent of Asian students scored proficient (down from 67 percent in 2019). Only 9 percent of students on free or reduced-price lunches were proficient (down from 17 percent in 2019) and only 6 percent of students with disabilities were proficient (down from 8 percent). The gap in math proficiency based on gender grew slightly; in 2019 33 percent of male and female students were proficient; in 2022 24 percent of male students and 21 percent of female students reached proficiency. The county data was not available by student group.

English Language Arts

Meanwhile, PGCPs saw increased proficiency scores in ELA at every grade level. However, statewide the percentage of students scoring proficient in ELA for grades three to eight averages at 44 percent, varying from a low of 21 percent (Baltimore City) to a high of 64 percent (Worcester County), with Prince George’s County coming in at 34 percent of students measuring proficient. Although Goldson emphasized that the county’s growth in ELA scores was mostly higher than the State’s, for both grades three to eight and the English 10 test, Prince George’s County was 30 percent below the highest-ranking district, landing fifth and sixth from the bottom respectively in the rankings of Maryland’s 24 school districts. Half of female students were proficient compared to 38 percent of male students.

Asian students were most proficient in ELA, with 73 percent proficiency in this group. Fifty-nine percent of white students were proficient, 31 percent of Black students and 29 percent of Hispanic/Latino students. Only 11 percent of students with disabilities and 26 percent of students on free or reduced-price lunches were proficient.

Goldson’s Response

Goldson said the results were not unexpected based on national trends, particularly in mathematics. “Last summer we identified mathematics as one of our school district’s priority areas and put strategies in place to address lagging achievement,” stated Goldson. She pointed to learning interventions such as in-school and online tutoring and enrichment opportunities based on need. Also, all pre-kindergarten classes for 4-year-olds transitioned to full-day programs beginning this school year. Maryland offers limited, need-assessed pre-school to low-income families and those receiving public assistance, in contrast to neighboring D.C. Public Schools, which offer free universal pre-K. Last summer, PGCPs offered summer school programming at no cost to parents. Goldson acknowledged in her January 24 press release that the data “clearly illustrates a critical need to accelerate learning.” Individual and school-level data is expected in March.

GATe Offers Promotional Videos For Greenbelt Nonprofits, Causes

by Susan Harris

Clockwise from top: screenshots from promos for Greenbelt Farmers Market, Take Action to Stop Maglev, GreenbeltOnline, Greenbelt Library and Greenbelt Refugee Aid

Attention Greenbelt-based nonprofits, charities and volunteer organizations: Greenbelt Access Television (GATe) will work collaboratively with your organization to create a short promo video. Once known as public service announcements or PSAs, short videos are now considered the medium most likely to go viral online and accomplish goals like introducing viewers to the organization, calling for volunteers or promoting a cause.

Introductory videos are usually “evergreen,” meaning of long-lasting value. They can be shared on social media and displayed on an organization’s website; an example of that is now on the home page of GreenbeltOnline.org.

Watch more promotional videos on GATe’s YouTube channel (link available on greenbeltaccessv.org) by clicking on the playlist called Greenbelt Groups and Causes. Videos promoting upcoming events can be seen in the Event Promos playlist.

To request a free promotional video at no cost, email Greenbeltaccess@gmail.com.

diaper bank and other resources as needed.

Rental Assistance

Greenbelt CARES managed the first round of federal funds through the CARES Act, which helped many Greenbelters get through the early days of the pandemic. Through the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds, they continue to help the community. Residents can still apply for rental and utility assistance as well as mortgage and homeowner association fee assistance. Most rental properties typically refer tenants to get eviction relief. The organization also works with local religious organizations through the Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association.

Need for Space

During the height of the pandemic clinicians and counselors conducted a lot of the counseling and workshops virtually via Zoom. However, as they returned to in-person care and services, space and privacy proved to be a critical need. According to Park, “The biggest obstacles facing CARES are growing demand and need for mental health services and adequate space to provide all our services. CARES continues to have a waitlist for mental health services and is located currently in the Municipal Building and the lower level of the Community Center. The expansion to the Community Center has allowed some relief for the space issues that CARES experiences; however, there is still a need for a final plan for adequate space for all CARES programs.”

For more information on the CARES program, visit: greenbeltnmd.gov/government/departments/greenbelt-cares.

February Art Workshops

The Greenbelt Recreation Arts Program offers three arts workshops in February. Advance registration is required.

Make “love bird” ornaments with Artist-in-Residence Rachel Ann Cross on Friday, February 10 from 6 to 7 p.m. at the Community Center. This workshop is open to everyone over the age of 6. Create beautiful, little mixed-media sculptures using paint, craft supplies and found objects.

Greenbelt artist Leah Cohen is offering two fiber arts programs. Big and Little Looms: Weaving for Kids will meet weekly on Fridays from February 3 through 24, between 4:15 and 5:45 p.m. This class is open to children ages 6 to 14, and will meet at the Community Center.

Cohen’s Victorian Scrappy Mittens workshop is open to anyone over the age of 12. This program will meet on Zoom on Sundays, February 12 and 19 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Students will learn to make embellished mittens out of scraps of wool that will be warm and stylish, but also provide a canvas to practice free-form embroidery.

For additional details and registration assistance, email Ruth Campbell at rcampbell@greenbeltnmd.gov. Fees apply. Greenbelt’s Arts programs are supported in part by a grant from the Maryland State Arts Council.

In specifying that all landlords must have a license, Councilmember Silke Pope pointed to cases where the cost of getting a license may harm some city residents.

Council supported the rental initiatives with six ayes and one nay from Pope.

School Zone Size

Senate Bill 11 decreases the radius around schools within which a school zone may be established and speed monitoring systems may be placed and used. The proposed decrease is from a half-mile to one-tenth of a mile.

Debate ensued primarily over whether the city's speed cameras would be in compliance. Councilmember Colin Byrd drew attention to the question of whether the one-tenth mile radius is enough to protect children coming and going to school, independent of the speed camera issue. Council voted to oppose the bill by six to one. The solitary nay to opposing the bill was from Byrd.

Rent Stabilization

Rent Stabilization Act of 2023, County Council Bill 007 would prohibit landlords from increasing rent by more than a certain percentage in some units, provides additional restrictions on rent increases, provides for an expiration of the Act and generally relates to rent restrictions for residential leases and rental units.

The Act implements a 3 percent rent increase cap for six months countywide. At the end of six months, Prince George's County Council is expected to have more well-defined legislation. It is not retroactive and has no appeal provision.

Pope pointed out that there is already a 5 percent real estate tax increase for property owners and argued this bill needs modifications. Councilmember Ric Gordon pointed to a letter from Prince George's County Municipal Association (PGCMA) supporting the legislation and noted that council would be either signing onto that letter or opposing it.

Council voted to sign onto the PGCMA letter with six ayes and one abstention from Byrd (Byrd is employed by the county).

Compensation Study

Dwayne Martinez, city director of Human Resources, introduced recommendations from a recent compensation study and began by noting that, before this one, the last time the city had a compensation study was over eight years ago. He spoke about the three options open for consideration by Council:

Option One: Move employees to the minimum compensation for their classification range if their salary is currently below that amount; all others would retain their existing salary.

Option Two: Employees below the minimum compensation for their classification level would move to the minimum while all others would receive a 2 percent increase. If those seeing an adjustment to the minimum for their classification would receive less than a 2 percent raise they would receive 2 percent instead. Therefore, every employee would see at least a 2 percent increase in compensation.

Option Three: Employees below the minimum for their level would move to the minimum, then all employees would receive a half percent decompression adjustment multiplied by their years of service, capped at a maximum of 5 percent. For example, an employee with 10 years of service would receive a 5 percent adjustment.

Council approved staff recommendation of Option Two and a portion of Option Three with all ayes. The cost-of-living adjustment is not included in the compensation adjustment but will be discussed within the budget meetings.

Committee Reports

The Board of Elections Committee submitted a report, Proposed Election Code and Charter Amendments: Early Voting and Date of Election Day Report, that was accepted by council. The Public Safety Advisory Committee's report, Review and Recommendations of Nine Pending Police Procedures, was accepted by council. The Arts Advisory Board's report, Report #23-1-Space Study, was also accepted by council.

More information on the meeting can be found on the city website (greenbeltnmd.gov) by clicking on the Municipal Access TV button on the homepage and then on the agenda packet for the meeting.

Nonprofit Grants

This program will be opening in February and will include nonprofits with a 501c(3) or 501c(19) designation (per U.S. Treasury guidelines). Grants are up to $25,000. Mayor Emmett Jordan mentioned that of the 239 registered nonprofits in Greenbelt, approximately 50 are actively involved in serving Greenbelt residents. The recipients of the grants have to be able to sustain themselves beyond the grant, according to Sandlin. Councilmember Kristen Weaver asked about the requirement that a nonprofit have an operating budget of $25,000 and whether that operating budget included in-kind donations. Sandlin replied that the operating budget would include donations or in-kind contributions. Staff recommends allocating $250,000 of the $1.5 million approved by council for these grants to be rolled out in mid-February. Council approved these nonprofit grants unanimously.

Business Recovery

Round three of the Business Recovery grants supports capacity improvement and operational improvements for small businesses. As part of business recovery from the pandemic, the Small Business Capital Improvement supports physical improvements to small businesses.

The ARPA website at engagegreenbelt.org has been updated to reflect all ARPA projects.

Charges of Indecent Exposure At Greenbelt Lake Are Dropped

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

The trial of Jamie Lee White, former Greenbelt resident and dean of students at a D.C. public school accused of exposing his genitals at Greenbelt Lake, was set to begin this week. However, charges in the case had to be dropped. Hannah Glasgow, spokesperson for the Greenbelt Police Department, told the News Review that the charges were dropped by the State’s Attorney’s Office due to circumstances outside of police control.

The report from two eyewitnesses on the morning of November 29 had led to White’s arrest, and Greenbelt Police had asked for any other people who had encountered White at the lake to come forward (see December 1 and December 8, 2022, issues). This week, Glasgow said no further victims had come forward. White was removed from his position at Bancroft Elementary School in the wake of his arrest. Indecent exposure is a misdemeanor in Maryland that sometimes leads to the defendant having to register as a sex offender.

With charges dropped, it’s unclear what impact the arrest will have on White’s career in education. White has been employed by both Prince George’s County and D.C. Public Schools (DCPS). A representative at Bancroft Elementary was unable to comment on whether White would be working at the school in the future and a spokesperson for DCPS told the News Review that they’re unable to comment on personnel or personal matters of employees.

scanned. No weapons of any kind are allowed, which is interpreted broadly to include many seemingly innocuous items, such as lighters and any metal silverware.

Potential jurors are expected to check in by 7:30 a.m. in the jury holding room on the second floor, which holds around 250 people. There are bathrooms within the juror area and many TVs around the room, which were tuned to HGTV.

Jurors are advised to bring their lunch, with plastic silverware and a cold pack if needed. The juror room has no microwave or refrigerator; vending machines were empty as they were scheduled to be replaced. There is a cafeteria in the courthouse, although a guard at the security checkpoint warned that service was slow.

There are only a few places to eat near the courthouse so jurors were advised to get carry-out if they went to any of these establishments and return to the courthouse as soon as they could. And reentering the courthouse means going through the security line again.

When all potential jurors are assembled in the morning, a court employee gives them a briefing on what they can expect during the day, which is “the unexpected.” Some jurors may spend all day in the lounge or be dismissed at any time throughout the day. Others will proceed through the process of jury selection and complete a trial. Or anything in between – cases may settle at any time during the process.

Juror 16’s Experience

As Juror 16 in a 79-person pool, I was a potential juror for a criminal trial featuring first degree murder, attempted murder and use of a firearm during commission of a felony. We were told that the trial was anticipated to last five days.

Escorted by bailiffs, we went upstairs to the courtroom. Those who couldn’t do stairs were escorted by another bailiff by elevator. The morning was spent in asking all the jurors a series of questions that enabled the judge to dismiss potential jurors for cause. Did we know the victim? the defendant? the witnesses? Had we been the victim of a crime? Did we belong to or support a number of advocacy groups? Did we believe expert witnesses or police officers were more inherently believable than other witnesses? Had we been to law school? Did we work in the justice system? Would it be a hardship, not just an inconvenience, to serve throughout a five-day trial?

People answering yes to each question stood and the judge either asked them questions in open court, had a bench conference or took down a list of juror numbers. For all questions, the overriding query was whether we could nevertheless review the evidence in a fair and impartial manner.

The judge excused a few people after the bench conference: someone who knew one of the victims, a Prince George’s County police officer who knew many of the witnesses, others for whom the reason was not apparent.

After a one-hour lunch break, the afternoon was spent in individual bench conferences with each juror. Those not being questioned read or looked at their phones. This process took almost four hours, at the end of which our pool of 79 was down to about 55, from which 12 jurors and two alternates were to be selected.

Then we formed a single line at the rail and were either seated or excused. Either the prosecutor or the defense could excuse, with no reason given. The judge advised us not to take it personally if we were excused. Both sides had to agree for a juror to be seated.

When 12 jurors were in the box, the judge asked if the sides were satisfied with the composition of the jury. The prosecution and defense then excused one person each that they had previously agreed to seat, including Juror 16.

The shuttle buses run less frequently in the evening, but one eventually came and took the excused jurors back to the parking lot. I was in my car at 7 p.m., 12 hours after I left it.

During the long final juror selection, impatience was becoming widespread. But the juror seated next to me retained her calm, saying, “Someone’s life is at stake here.”

Jury duty was at first interesting, then tedious, but throughout, it was important and necessary. It is, like voting, the duty of a citizen.

Museum Will Host Virtual Tour of Jim Crow Museum

On Wednesday, February 22 at 6 p.m., the Greenbelt Museum will host a free, virtual tour of the Jim Crow Museum of Racist Memorabilia led by staff of the museum, which is located on the campus of Ferris State University in Big Rapids, Mich. According to the museum website, “The Jim Crow Museum is the nation’s largest publicly accessible collection of artifacts of intolerance. The Museum contextualizes the dreadful impact of Jim Crow laws and customs. The Museum uses objects of intolerance to teach tolerance and promote a more just society.”

Most of the over 9,000 artifacts in the museum’s collection were created between the 1870s and the 1960s. The objects on display both shaped and reflected attitudes toward African Americans during the Jim Crow era. Greenbelt was established in 1937, right in the midst of that era. Black families were excluded from the government-built housing project, despite early plans for the community where space for black families was included.

The types of harmful imagery displayed at the Jim Crow Museum sadly would have been all too familiar to Greenbelt’s early residents.

The overarching purpose of the Jim Crow Museum is to educate visitors about race relations in the U.S. and to share the de-meaning images prevalent during the Jim Crow era without sugar-coating the past. The museum, however, also features positive displays, including stories and artifacts about African American achievement and the civil rights movement. In the past several years the museum has added artifacts defaming women, Poles, Native Americans, Mexicans, Jews and gay people.

This is a virtual event. Space is limited; register in advance via Eventbrite (link on greenbeltmuseum.org). An email with a Zoom link will be sent to attendees closer to the date of tour. This event is sponsored by the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum and the City of Greenbelt.

Activists Celebrate Anniversary Of the Nuclear Weapons Ban

by Donna Hoffmeister

This past week Greenbelt activists presented a certificate of appreciation and flowers to the embassies of the nine nations that ratified the U.N. Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in the last 12 months: The Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste, Cabo Verde, Guatemala, Cote D'Ivoire, both Congo and the Democratic Republic of Congo, Dominican Republic, Grenada and Malawi. The treaty entered into force on January 21, 2021. Sixty-eight nations have now ratified the treaty, decreeing nuclear weapons constitutionally illegal in their territories. This historic treaty, voted on by 122 nations, is the only comprehensive, legally binding instrument that bans the development, possession, threat and use of nuclear weapons. Last year the group presented certificates of appreciation and bouquets to embassies of the 59 nations that had ratified the treaty by its first anniversary. (See Greenbelt News Review, January 27, 2022.) Another 24 countries are actively in the process of ratifying the treaty this year.

The Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste was the first embassy visited on Monday, January 23. Timor-Leste is an island nation north of Australia, once under Portuguese rule, that became an independent nation in 2001. First Secretary of Timor-Leste, Fonseca dos Santos Pereira, accepted the certificate of appreciation and flowers, telling the Greenbelters how proud he was to have been present when his country first signed the treaty in 2018. He expressed his conviction that nuclear disarmament is urgently needed now.

The discussion with the first secretary led quickly to Russian President Vladimir Putin's threat to use nuclear weapons in Ukraine. Last September Putin cited U.S. "precedent" in using nuclear weapons in Japan during WWII and said Russia would "use all the means" at its disposal to "defend" itself in its war against Ukraine. Harvard Professor Matthew Bunn estimates the probability that Russia will use a nuclear weapon in Ukraine to be between 10 and 20 percent, based on the public statements Putin has made. The group at the Timor-Leste embassy agreed that these odds are much too high.

Coincidentally, on Tuesday, January 24, the Science and Security Board of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists moved the hands of the Doomsday Clock forward, largely (though not exclusively) because of the mounting dangers of the war in Ukraine. The Clock now stands at 90 seconds to midnight – the closest we have been to nuclear war and global catastrophe since the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis. Russia and the U.S. possess more than 90 percent of all existing nuclear weapons. The U.S. spends $50 billion annually on nuclear weapons. Princeton University's Program on Science and Global Security ran a simulation in 2019 that indicated that one tactical nuke could trigger a total nuclear exchange killing 34 million people in just five hours. The journal Nature Food ran an article, August, 2022, that stated a full-scale nuclear war between the U.S. and Russia would shroud the planet in 150 million tons of soot, making food production nearly impossible and starving most of humanity.

Governor Moore Appoints Washington to State Senate

Delegate Alonzo T. Washington (D-Prince George's) was appointed state senator on Thursday, January 26, by Maryland Governor Wes Moore to fill the District 22 vacancy created when former senator Paul Pinsky was appointed director of the Maryland Energy Administration. When sworn in on Monday evening, Washington became the first Black state senator from District 22 since the district was first created in the early 1970s.

Serving in the House of Delegates for the last decade, Washington's impact has strongly resonated in Prince George's County. During his career he has been appointed to several leadership positions, including vice chair of the House Ways and Means Committee, chair of the Education Subcommittee, chair of the Election Law Subcommittee, deputy majority whip, parliamentarian, first vice chair of the Legislative Black Caucus, first vice chair of the Prince George's House Delegation and chair of the County Law Enforcement Subcommittee. "This is a testament to his leadership and how hard he has worked for this District," said Riverdale resident Patricia Parker, when asked about Washington being appointed to the state senate by Moore. "People around the community know and trust Alonzo, because we know that he will always fight for progressive values and put his constituents first."

Washington won re-election as delegate three times. Information in this article is from a Maryland House of Delegates press release.

New Deal Café's Back Room Features Friday Morning Music

by Mary Moien

If you are fortunate enough to have free time on Friday mornings and you like music, stop in at the New Deal Café between 10 a.m. and noon. Most Fridays, Debbie and John Annen, along with Barbara Stevens and Karl Neidhardt, are chatting, rehearsing and playing instruments in the back room of the Café. On a recent Friday, Debbie was on the ukulele, John on the fiddle (and sometimes leading the singing), Barbara on guitar and Karl on bass. Each musician had a chance to choose a favorite piece to play. When Do the Locomotion was played, a few in the casual crowd began to dance in between the tables. The group considers this to be an informal "open rehearsal" as they discuss and perfect songs, sometimes playing them over several times. Listeners are encouraged to sit, sip and sing along.

Debbie and John are known collectively as DeJohn (pronounced like the mustard) and their website shows a jar of Dijon mustard with the heading of "a little dab of music is like adding spice to your life." Debbie, John and others have been highlighted at open mic nights and other gigs at the New Deal Café as well as outdoor concerts around the city. The group normally rehearses outdoors in area parks. With the advent of cold weather, they asked Dan Gillotte, manager of the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket, if they could rehearse in the Café during daytime hours.

This eclectic group can be found holding their open rehearsal most Friday mornings at the New Deal. For more information about these musicians and to confirm their dates, email Debbie Annen at debbieannen@yahoo.com.
